

D&D bio:

Amy Vorpahl is a content and music creator who tends to laugh at everything. Her extensive background in sketch and improv makes her Dungeon Mastering lean a little bit silly and a lotta bit fun! She has been playing D&D since college, and her two music albums, "Songs in the Key of D&D" and "Behold Her Dreams," were inspired by many characters and experiences at the table. Amy has written for Official D&D books, "Candlekeep Mysteries" and "Fizban's Treasury of Dragons;" and she has played D&D on notable streams such as Critical Role, Dimension 20, D&D Beyond, Geek and Sundry, The Guild, and The Dungeon Run.

Actor bio:

Amy Vorpahl (SAG-AFTRA) is an actor, content and music creator who tends to laugh at everything. She has worked in the digital space for several years as a writer, producer, host and gamer for several years at places like Nerdist, Geek and Sundry, BuzzFeed, and Dropout. Amy has spent over ten years performing improv and sketch at the comedy schools in LA including Groundlings Sunday Company, UCB, and iO West, and she has used all of that training in roles in movies as well as TV shows like "The Newsroom," "The Mindy Project," and "Super Fun Night!" Most recently, she played the lead in an animated digital series "Live from the 8th Dimension."

Writer bio:

Amy Vorpahl (SAG-AFTRA) is a writer, content and music creator who tends to laugh at everything. She has worked in the digital space for several years as a writer, producer, host and gamer for several years at places like Nerdist, Geek and Sundry, BuzzFeed, and Dropout. Amy has spent over ten years performing improv and sketch at the comedy schools in LA including Groundlings Sunday Company, UCB, and iO West, and she has used all of that training in comedy writing on various digital shows like "Mothership" and "Sidekick: with Matt Mira" on Alpha, "What's News" and "Mostly Harmless" on Comic Con HQ. She sold her half hour comedy pilot to Hulu about nerdy girls dating, but it died before it got made. She was also a staff writer on "Making a Scene with James Franco," which was nominated for an Emmy.